VOL. 112 NO. 113. MADISON, WIS., FRIDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 12, 1909. PRICE TWO CENTS.

National Tribute Paid to Lincoln

Throughout the length and breadth of the United States today hundreds of cities, towns and hamlets are paying tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, on this centennial anniversary of his birth. Thousands of meetings of various kinds were in progress during the day, the object of persons participated therein. President Roosevelt has proclaimed the day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories and in many states in the cities the day was practically observed as a holiday.

Chief among the many celebrations in honor of the beloved president were the exercises attending the laying of the cornerstone memorial building, erected by popular subscription, to shelter the log cabin, which was the early home of Lincoln, on the Lincoln farm at Hodgenville, Ky., where the war president was born. The cornerstone was laid by President Roosevelt, who also delivered an address, and there also were addresses by Gov. William of Kentucky; Ex-Gov. Jos. W. Folk of Missouri, Secretary of War Luke E. Wright and General James G. Wilson.

Ambassador James Bryce and William J. Bryan were to be the chief speakers at a Lincoln banquet to be held at Springfield, Ill.

At Peoria, Ill., there was to be an important celebration in which Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador, was scheduled to take part.

In the celebration at Harrisburg, Pa., Vice-president Fairbanks was the speaker, and in the Pittsburg celebration James S. Sherman, vice president-elect, was to deliver an address.

NEW BUILDING TO HOUSE LOG CABIN BIRTHPLACE.

Thousands Attend Exercises in Little Hamlet of Hodgenville, Ky.—Gov. Folk, Secretary of War Wright and Cabinet Speak.

Hodgenville, Ky., Feb. 12.—In the presence of several thousand persons, including nearly two highly distinguished in American life, the cornerstone of the marble memorial structure which will shelter the log cabin where Abraham Lincoln was born was today laid with appropriate ceremonies by President Roosevelt.

The tent which served as an auditorium was filled and from the crowd which gathered around the hillcrest spoke the orator, bonair the platform for the speakers and the marble slab of the cornerstone laying, in the cabin itself, a little building not over sixteen feet square, built of logs, notched and laid together, stanner fashion. The logs are worn smooth where the back has pealed off and rotted, and the chinks are filled with clay.

Five special trains from Hodgenville to the little hamlet after the memorial brought hundreds of people and all

MADISON GETS LINCOLN STATUE; BRITTINGHAM GIVES TO UNIVERSITY

Replica of Bronze Monument to Be Unveiled at Emancipator's Birthplace Is Donated for Wisconsin's Upper Campus.

Lincoln's centenary was a notable day for the University of Wisconsin. The gift of Weinert's heroic bronze statue of Lincoln, the only replica of the one being erected in Hodgenville, Ky., birthplace of the great commoner, was announced by President Charles R. Van Hise at the Lincoln centenary exercises at the university this morning. The statue is given by Mr. Brittingham in memory of Thomas E. Brittingham of this city.

In the presence of nearly 6,000 people the gift was made known. The audience was moved to profound silence by the generosity of the giver and the appropriateness of the gift.

FOR A COUNTY OF HEROES.

The statue, of which a picture by herewith reproduced, is to be placed in the center of a court of honor on the upper campus. It will be unveiled at commencement in June, one month after the unveiling of the original in Hodgenville, Ky., which it is expected President Taft will deliver the address.

The statue, which represents Lincoln seated in a rustic chair, is seven feet high, which is equivalent to a standing figure nine feet nine inches in height. It is to be mounted upon a granite block six feet six inches in height, the total height of the statue and plinth to be thirteen feet six inches.

WORK OF ARTIST.

The sculptor, Adolph Alexander Weinman, who was chosen by the Lincoln memorial commission after considerable deliberation because of the national significance of the monument to be erected at Lincoln's birthplace, was a pupil of the late Augustus St. Gaudens. He also studied with Martini, D. C. French, Otto L. Warsty and Charles H. Niehaus. He has done much public memorial work for Alexander Hamilton at Detroit, a commission which he won in competition; and the Maryland Union Soldiers' and Sailors' monument erected in Baltimore in 1907, also awarded to him after competition. Mr. Weinman has been engaged on the Lincoln statue for nearly two years. The work, which is now nearing completion, has received great praise and commendation from critics in and around New York who have had an opportunity to view it.

The statute will stand on the mound half way up the hill. The court of honor which it is designed to establish will extend to the south of the campus, and on either side of the statue there will be a row of trees in front of the south and north wings still to be Henry Vilas Hall theater and the university museum. The former was given by the widow of the will of the late William F. Vilas; the latter is proposed in the general design for the university as planned by the university architects, and which will be considered again at an early meeting of the regents. The statue will cost about $10,000.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF GIFT

In making the announcement of Mr. Brittingham's gift, President Van Hise said:

"Through the cooperation of the University Lincoln Club and the Madison Association of the Sons of Lincoln Lincoln is to be unveiled at his birthplace, Hodgenville, Ky., on

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

Classic Delivered at the Dedication of the National Cemetery Nov. 19, 1863.

Fourscore and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

Ford in Lec. Wis., Feb. 12. (Special.)—There has been only one Abraham Lincoln, and there will probably never be another," said Gen. E. S. Bragg today in paying tribute to the greatness of the Emancipator. "It is therefore only fitting that the American nation today should join in the observance of his one hundredth birthday anniversary. Lincoln was a great man. He was the only man to handle the momentous problems that confronted the country at that critical period. I doubt if Lincoln would be a great man if he were president at the present time, because he would not be able to accomplish the things he did in the days of civil strife. Lincoln was no dainty politician who could not do his own dirty work."

Death of August F. Buckman.

Marshfield, Wis., Feb. 12 (Special)—August F. Buckman, one of the first settlers of Milwaukee and later a pioneer in northern Wisconsin, died last night, aged 69 years. He was the father of A. C. Buckman, district attorney of Milwaukee. He went to Milwaukee in 1854 and came to Marshfield. One son who was manager of a brewery in Marshfield was killed by a train last fall. This fact hastened the death of the father.

CHURCHMEN UP FOR CONTEMPT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 12 (Special)—Another chapter was added to one of the great religious farces in Milwaukee when Judge Belden today signed an order requiring J. Maurice and Philip Bruteh to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. They are the plaintiffs in a suit to prevent the property of the Evangelical Creed congregation of Milwaukee being used for further worship. In a previous decision Judge Belden granted an injunction restraining the people of the congregation from diverting the property to any other use than that of the Evangelical Creed. The plaintiffs have been cited for contempt for violating this order.

THOMAS E. BRITTINGHAM.

Thomas Evans Brittingham was born in Hannibal, Mo., May 18, 1850, the son of Dr. Bryan Baird and Mary J. (Lesure) Brittingham. He attended Hannibal schools. In 1870 he moved to Clear Creek Cubb. Chaffee county, Col., and afterwards to Lake county, Col., in both of which states he followed the mercantile business. He located in Merrill Wis., in 1895, and came to Madison in December, 1898, having been engaged in the lumber trade since coming to this state. At Portland, Jefferson county, on December 31, 1885 he was married to Miss Mary E. Lacy Clark, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, a daughter of James Adams and Mary (Hughes) Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Brittingham are the parents of three children: Margaret, Harold and Thomas Evans.

Mr. Brittingham has been prominently concerned with the upbuilding of Madison in an esthetic way. In his park and pleasure drive movement he has been one of the leading spirits, and the credibility of his interest has been manifested in large and material ways. His present beautification to the city were his gift or Brittingham park, a beautiful tract of wooded land on the shores of Lake Wingra, which he deeded to the people of the city. He also became one of the largest property owner entering into the movement to have the lake front beautified by the munificence of Mr. Brittingham.

His interest in the beautiful in nature is shown by his well known taste on the state park board of which he is chairman. In all matters which he recently traveled over the state visiting places of great interest he only proposed as is evidenced by state parks, but several recommendations recently have been embodied in a report to the governor.

JENKIN LLOYD-JONES DELIVERS NOTABLE ADDRESS ON THE PRESIDENT'S LIFE.

EXPONENT OF TRUE DEMOCRACY

BROTHERHOOD ON WORLD SCALE THE LINCOLN IDEAL.

PRESERVE BALLOT'S SANCTITY

Pure Elections, Civic Honor, Enlightenment of the People—These the Hope of the Future.

Lincoln, as man, president, martyr, raised from a lowly cabin to the highest pinnacle of a nation's love and admiration, was honored at the university today. In an audience packing the big gymnasium to the doors, numbering nearly 5,000 people, none was left unmoved by the message of the hour as uttered by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd-Jones of Chicago. Mr. Lloyd Jones' address was a plea for emulation of the true democracy that was the part of Lincoln's rule living, and a more intelligent appreciation of the duty men owe to his fellows.

Second in importance and interest was President Van Hise's announcement of Mr. Brittingham's benefaction in the form of a bronze statue of the Emancipator, to be placed in commanding position on the upper campus. The announcement that greeted the announcement was one never to be forgotten, more decidedly because it is one of the first of its kind in the history of the university.

Tribute to Brittingham.

"The commencement hour permitted one full sized replica of the Lincoln statute to be had. There were a great number of competitors for this replica. Through the liberality of Mr. Thomas B. Brittingham of Madison it is to come to the University of Wisconsin, where it will be unveiled next commencement. When this opportunity to serve the university and the state came Mr. Brittingham, he appreciated it at once, and gladly agreed to express the necessary funds."—La Follette's Weekly.

BELIEVED IN BROTHERHOOD.

The pride of party, the giving of offices, the dress of shoddy, and the inducements for prosperity, disqualify men today for many places. The coming torch-bearers in the advancing army of democracy will be men like Lloyd-Jones. Those who would be leaders in the future must be disciples of Lincoln. Whatever else we may must believe that the writers of the Declaration of Independence knew what they said, and said what they meant, must believe that the brotherhood of man includes all races, colors, and conditions of men, and that a government of the people, for the people, and by the people must be protected only by heroic acceptance of this logic and a consistent devotion to this idea."

"Let us review how we waste this day in mere retrospect, lost in our devotion to have the great debaters, Lincoln, and Douglas, we trail their banners to the ground. Lincoln was a speaker, 'We belie our flattering words of other days and other men, and muzzle the words of brotherhood in the presence of a race or people or skin: If in spite of five illuminative decades we are not in the full presence of the lastorable logic of the Declaration of Independence we have like the relentless mills of God, grind out the principles of democracy, but they do not take root in our souls.

"Let us beware that we split the standard bearers of Jefferson, Paine and Lincoln in the crooked lens of social opposites, commercial activity, and political halfheartedness as we still do. Not yet! Not yet!

EXAMPLE IN CIVIC HONOR.

"Lincoln's appeal was to the people, not bullets," said Rev. Mr. Lloyd-Jones in opening. "We are not to lament the bullets, for who will question the price of freedom in a whole human soul, however black and it may be? Lincoln's example is one of civic honor.

mortality? But the bullets were invented by man and the battle fields are perpetual and inevitable. The battle ground is the field of honor and red. The logic of Lincoln calls for a different kind of battle and one fought less lethal. As you would love and serve the country's welcoming, you must preserve the sanctity of the ballot box, the purity of the home and freedom of electing day, you must be willing to fight with ballot the virtuous ballot in the hand of the citizen, the ballot in the hand of congress, the ballot of the united and female. Lexington, Ky., Feb. 12.—Probably the most unique celebration of Lincoln's birthday held in this city was that of the Nancy Hanks Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which was at the Hunters' stock farm, this morning. Nancy Hanks was the world-famous gaiting mare named for Lincoln's mother, held a luncheon at the loaded reception, under the auspices of the chapter, which Mrs. E. Hudson, den issued invitations to the affair in the name of Nancy Hanks.

The schools throughout society and the eastern Kentucky all celebrated today.

Senior Wisconsin Senator Determined to Secure Recognition for Novitiates

FILIBUSTER IS FIRST RUMOR

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—Senator La Follette crossed swords with Senator Aldrich yesterday, and he will be exciting rumor that another La Follette filibuster was on. Senator Aldrich brought in the naval appropriations bill and started it through in record time. Senator La Follette objected to the consideration of the bill, and here is the hands of the committee on naval affairs. The senator from Wisconsin declares that he will not be ready to have important measures this session, and that he will insist that the senate shall have time to consider them. Deerhill and Stoudenmire, which will be taken up by the senate tomorrow, is the defense institution. Mr. Brist, the senator from Idaho, will speak in favor of Mr. Johnson and is of the opinion that he will be able to defeat the measure. Mr. Brist has a speech on the floor of the senate today, and will speak for two hours.

Mrs. Norman Smithers, a former resident of Madison, died at her home at Denver, Col., where she had gone for the benefit of her health. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burial. Thursday, at Fort Morgan, where the remains will be brought for burial.

The funeral of Elmer S. McWhirter was held from the home, 616 North Pinckney street, this afternoon. Rev. A. A. Ewing of Grace church officiated. The pallbearers were Dr. H. L. Moseley and Henry Research and Messrs. Hamilton, Hoffman, Bowman of Sparta, brother of the deceased, and Wilson.

William Spitzer, formerly of this city, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Schultz, 1017 Jenifer street, at the age of 70. Mr. Spitzer was born in Posen, Germany, and came to this country about 35 years ago, making his home in Madison for about 30 years. He leaves one and three daughters, William Spitzer of Madison, Mrs. M. Hilt of Janesville and Mrs. Schultz of this city. Mrs. Fred Pohl of Madison is a sister of the late Mrs. Gottlieb Greve, where he spent his last days.

MADISON STRICTLY UNION

Madison's distinction as a "town" is further emphasized in the city directory. The first edition of the directory, which has just been published, is the first to be issued in the afternoon, to all appearances. The directory contains 200 pages—one page more than the previous volume—and includes the residence listings and other pages.

PICKFORD TELLS EXPERIENCE.

Describes How It Feels to Have a Fractured Skull.

Not often does a man have the satisfaction of relating how it feels to have a fractured skull, but H. W. Pickford of this city can boast of such experience. In a letter to an old home paper he has this to say of his recent accident:

Four weeks ago, Monday night, Jan. 11, I fell while returning from a meeting of the trustees of the Unitarian church, and fractured my skull on a cement walk, while fully half a mile from home. The force of the fall burst the drum of my left ear, and a severe hemorrhage followed. The doctors say that the bursting of the ear drum saved my life, as it prevented a blood clot and paralysis. I have no recollection of the manner in which I got home. My hearing is returning, also my sense of smell; and while my eyes are weak, the doctors assure me that I am coming out all right. Naturally I am weak from the shock, which was followed by days of unconsciousness, but I am now able to walk about the house without help, and hope soon to be able to get into the business struggle again.

Wont' Tackle Veto Yet.

Washington, Feb. 11.—All attempts to pass at this time the census bill over the president's veto were abandoned today by leaders of the house and senate. The enactment of a census law for taking a decennial census probably will be made the subject of legislation at the special session.

May Reduce Knox's Pay.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The senate committee on judiciary today reached the conclusion that by reducing the salary of the office of secretary of state to $8,000, Senator Knox will be eligible to appointment by Taft for that position.

Milwaukee Alderman at Large.

Henry Adler, the large alderman at large of Milwaukee, was circulating in the legislative chambers today. He weighs nearly 400 pounds. Senator Page said he brought him out so that Madison people might see what an alderman at large looked like.

MADISON BOWS TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

TRIBUTES TO HIS MEMORY ARE DELIVERED BY PROF. FREEMAN AND SEN. FAIRCHILD.

HIS WORTH AND WORK EXALTED

Exercises Are Held as a Fitting Dedication of New Assembly Chamber.

The spirit of Lincoln pervaded the beautiful new assembly chamber in the capitol last night when, as a fitting dedication, it was made to harbor several hundred citizens of Madison come to listen to memorial tributes. The exercises were beautiful in their simplicity and in the example of love and honor the people hold for the martyred president. By veterans of the great rebellion, by their sons, and by their sons' sons was honor paid to the memory of Lincoln. The net effect left was one of fitting and meritorious tribute.

The speakers were Prof. John C. Freeman of the university, captain of a cavalry regiment in the union army, later United States minister to Denmark; and State Senator E. T. Fairchild of Milwaukee, a consistent member of the order of the Sons of Veterans. Both lauded the life of Lincoln in noble language and inspiring thought.

GOVERNOR ADDS TRIBUTE.

Gov. J. O. Davidson was introduced as chairman of the evening by Commander T. C. Richmond of Lucius Fairchild post, G. A. R., after the commander had delivered a brief but beautiful tribute to the memory of Lincoln. Gov. Davidson paid honor to the worth of Lincoln as a man in a class by himself and whose very name has given liberty a new meaning, to endure for all time.

The prayer was delivered by Rev. W. J. McKay, department chaplain of the G. A. R. The Gettysburg address was recited by pupils of the Lincoln school in concert. At the head of the column of boys was the flag. The address was followed by the salute of the flag. The Mozart club sang two numbers, and a Lincoln memorial song was sung by M. J. Rawson and Mrs E. C. DeMoe. The exercises closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the Mozart club and the audience.

SENATOR FAIRCHILD'S WORDS.

Senator Fairchild spoke sympathetically of the varied phases of Lincoln's character. Lincoln's great work as president, he said, cannot be considered apart from his general worth as a man, and it might be stated that his work and worth are really synonymous terms. When Lincoln faced trials that would have staggered any other man, it was his simple intelligence, his patriotism, his Christianity, that buoyed him up and led him to see the way out, and the right way every time. In his firm reliance on God rested his ability to pass over the doubts and criticisms that would make others quail, and by his always hopeful, moderate, steadfast spirit move on to final achievement. His faith in the people, said Senator Fairchild, was not misplaced. He could see confidence "resting on the brow of righteousness." His sole desire was to pass the government on to his successor unimpaired. Through the long years of war his faith never faltered. "If God is with us, we will prevail," was his motto, and "With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right" was his measure.

Prof. Freeman spoke in part as follows:

THE MAN FOR THE CRISIS.

Standing on a railway platform of a small hamlet in southern New York on May 18, 1860, was a group of men awaiting dispatches from the national convention in session in Chicago. It was clear to each of them that the favorite son of New York, the polished orator, the skillful diplomat, the experienced statesman, William H. Seward, must be the nominee. How profound our disappointment when the message came, "Nomination of Abe Lincoln, rail-splitter of Illinois." Rail-splitting was a useful occupation, but we were not convinced that it was satisfactory training for the presidency. As for myself I had never heard the name. You will pardon an eighteen-year-old boy for that, if Wendell Phillips at the same time could inquire with indignation, "Who is this Lincoln, this huckster in politics?"

In the course of the next two years we found reason to revise our opinions. "In the whole history of America the selection of Washington to lead the armies of the Revolution is the only event to be compared in good fortune with this nomination of Abraham Lincoln." Seward lost the nomination because he was thought too closely identified with the pronounced anti-slavery men to carry the October states. He was too well known as a statesman. Lincoln's availability as a candidate gave him the nomination. Considering the huckstering and trading and promises of cabinet positions by Lincoln's managers at Chicago, about which I hasten to say that Mr. Lincoln knew nothing, one is prompted to say that it is difficult to resist the impression that the selfish pettinesses and passions of men were utilized and controlled by divine providence.

OF UNPROMISING BIRTH.

It seems that in an hour of peril, when men and nations need a leader, God raises up one of the right material for the exigency. Who was this man of the hour, brought forward by providence for this crisis in the nation's history? Whence came he? From the humblest origins—a log cabin in the backwoods of Kentucky, of undistinguished parents. Hereditary traits often skip a generation or two, reappearing further down the line. This was the case with Abraham Lincoln. His father, Thomas Lincoln, a shiftless, migratory carpenter, not good at his trade, an ignorant man, able to write only the letters which made his signature, rested not much above the bottom of existence in a frontier settlement. What chance had he? His father, shot by the Indians when Thomas was six. No schools in the vicinity, daily bread was all he could expect. His third remove was to southern Indiana, where the family lived for a year in a shack fourteen feet square, a covered shed of three sides, the fourth open to the weather. There were bears in their caves in Indiana that winter more comfortably housed than the Lincoln family. Do these facts stagger your belief, and do you hesitate to accept the Lincoln story? Then let me point you to the miserable, cramped clay-walled cottage where the greatest poet of Scotland first saw the light; to that lawgiver who, for three thousand years, has influenced the world more than any other mortal, but who as an infant was found floating in a basket in the reeds of the Nile; let me remind you of the child laid in a manger at Bethlehem.

A SELF-EDUCATED MAN.

For Abraham, hardly one year of schooling in his whole life. Some books came to his hands; with them he educated himself. The Bible, Aesop, Robinson Crusoe, Bunyan, the history of the United States, Weems' Washington, after a while Shakespeare and Burns. Two or three trips by flatboat down the Mississippi widened his vision of men and things. On the lower river they had as passengers, or perhaps, I should say, as freight, a slave gang in iron fetters, a sight which he said was a continual torment to him. He disliked to visit the Ohio or any other slave border. These sights, emphasized by a visit to the slave market at New Orleans, made him say, "If I ever get a chance to hit that thing, I will hit it hard."

The most striking feature in Lincoln's character was his close touch with humanity; at first with the frontiersmen of his county, then the people of his state, then the states of the north, and at the time of his death many thought that they saw signs that he would come into touch with and give a kind of unity to the varied and even hostile elements of the whole country.

EARLY HATED SLAVERY.

A synopsis of the thought of one of Bacon's essays requires more space than the essay itself. So with Lincoln's speeches; an analysis of the thought shows that the shortest form has already been used. He used no flourishes of rhetoric, but simply appealed to reason and the sense of right. He said to a friend, "Sometimes in the excitement of speaking I seem to see the end of slavery. How this will come, when it will come, by whom it will come, I cannot tell, but it will surely come."

On his way to Washington he spoke at several state capitals, and on Feb. 22, an auspicious day, at Independence hall, Philadelphia, he said, "I am filled with deep emotion at finding myself standing in this place where were collected the wisdom, the patriotism, the devotion to principle from which sprang the institutions under which we live. All the political sentiments I entertain have been drawn from the sentiments which originated and were given to the world from this hall. The declaration of independence gave promise that in due time the weight would be lifted from the shoulders of all men and that all should have an equal chance. Now, my friends, can this country be saved on that basis? If it can, I shall consider myself one of the happiest men in the world if I can help to save it. If this country cannot be saved upon that principle, I was about to say I would rather be assassinated on this spot than surrender it."

LINCOLN'S MAGNANIMITY.

Lincoln followed Washington in selecting his rivals for the nomination as members of his cabinet—Seward, Chase, Cameron and Bates; a somewhat difficult cabinet to manage. Some of these officers for a while took Lincoln for a mere figurehead. As time went on, it became plainer and plainer that he was a real president. And now that we have the letters and diaries of these men, the dominence of Lincoln is plainer than ever.

Mr. Lincoln dealt with the border states very delicately. A great portion of the anti-slavery men, with Mr Greeley at their head, were incensed at him for this. But his cooler judgment told him to put the maintenance of the union as the main issue, while he had confidence that the destruction of slavery would come along in due time. He did not think that as president he had a right to do everything that as a private individual he would like to do. In April, 1864, he wrote, "I am naturally anti-slavery. If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong. I cannot remember when I did not so think and feel, and yet I have never understood that the presidency conferred upon me an unrestricted right to act officially upon this judgment and feeling." To dispose of slaves in the border states he proposed compensated emancipation and colonization in Africa, or South America, as, in fact, he had proposed for the whole south before the war. The country never took to it. It did not want to pay $1,000,000,000 for the slaveholders. It would have been better than to pay $10,000,000,000 for the war and pensions, the principal and interest of the public debt, as we have done, to say nothing of the financial losses of the south and the losses of life on both sides. In the winter of 1863 congress did give the president a chance to try it by appropriating $15,000,000 for an experiment in Missouri. But Missourians wouldn't have it. They were afraid of the United States bonds, although Mr. Lincoln told them that bonds were better than bondsmen, and that two-legged property was very uncertain property to hold. They would have nothing to do with it, and so afterwards gave up their slaves for nothing instead of for United States bonds.

MATCHLESS AS SPEAKER.

Lincoln's second inaugural was one of the most famous speeches ever uttered. It has been compared to the utterances of the prophetic writers of the Old Testament and the apostles of the New. It closes with the famous passage, "With malice towards none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widows and for his orphans—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Is it true, then, that this hard-footed, half-clothed child of a poor white family, ill-sheltered in winter in an open shack which a wild animal would have deserted for a cave in the earth, without formal education, after long hours of toil, stretched on the unpaved floor, gathering by the firelight on the hearth such scraps of knowledge as he could, is it true that he rose to high public station, even the chief magistracy of the richest, mightiest nation in the world; that his utterances on state occasions for the last ten years of his life have been likened to the Psalms, the visions of Isaiah and the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians? Yes, it is true. It tends to prove that there is in this human a spark of the divine.

HIS HUMOROUS NATURE

Lincoln, like Shakespeare, touched all the keys of human experience, from the lowest notes to the top of the compass. It has been taught that the author of the dark tragedies of Hamlet and Lear would have lost his reason if he had not been able to find relaxation in the merriment of "As You Like It," "The Merry Wives," and "The Tempest." The same might have been true of Lincoln if he had not been possessed of the humor which makes a clear atmosphere about the realities of life. This humor served not merely as relaxation, but also as argument. In 1864 when the Cleveland convention nominated McClellan, Mr. Lincoln's humorous story, "not best to swap horses while crossing the stream," won him thousands of votes. Scores of his pithy sayings served as solid arguments: "In giving freedom to the slave we assure freedom to the free." "The struggle of today is for a vast future also." "If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong." When the cabinet, congress and the country were criticising him for giving up the envoys taken off the British steamer, his reply "One war at a time," silenced them all.

VASTNESS OF HIS TASK.

Let us refer a moment to the beginning of his presidency. He comes back from the excitement of his inauguration and sits down to think over the situation. The treasury empty, the national credit gone, the small army scattered and unequipped, half its officers gone over to the confederacy, he himself a minority president, the three opposing candidates having polled a million more votes than he, his own party discordant and as yet without reputation, the majority of the people viewing him with bitter prejudice and even contempt, the great nations of Europe awaiting an opportunity for armed intervention. Yet, in spite of all, this untried man of the frontier held together the factions of his own party, won the confidence of the north and the respect of the south, crushed the most stupendous of rebellions which was supported by armies more vast, an organization more perfect, and directed by generals of greater military skill than were ever arrayed for the dismemberment of any nation.

GROWS GREATER WITH TIME.

He was as magnanimous as he was true. Witness his appointment of his most abusive critic as secretary of war, and of the cabinet officer who tried to defeat him for renomination, to the high office of chief justice of the United States. Advancing as fast as public opinion warranted against the institution of slavery, he proclaimed emancipation and clinched the work by securing the passage of the thirteenth amendment to the constitution prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude throughout the United States.

Secretary Hay, who was Lincoln's private secretary for four years, and afterwards spent years on Nicolay and Hay's Life of Lincoln, was asked, "As you continue your study of Lincoln, does he seem larger or less?" "He seems greater and greater," said Mr. Hay. And as to John Hay, so to all students of the civil war.

The Thing That Counts.

What will man not do for those whom he loves! The music hall singer and her canary bird tell the same old story. She was in Messina when the earthquake came and the sea came and the fire came; but she finally reached Naples by means of a German steamer. The steamer brought some eight hundred refugees; wounded some of them were; there were children without parents and parents without children; and all of them were ragged and worn out with the struggle and the flight. One of these was the music hall singer, with her dress as tattered as that of a beggar, and probably with pretty much all that she had on earth lost, but with her canary bird; and as the big boat was docked the little fellow trilled his loudest and merriest in a song of thanksgiving for all hands that they were saved. The bird sat perched on her finger, well knowing that her hand was home and fortune and all good things for him; and she—well, she had a good deal left, for she had saved the little life of her dear comrade and friend. It is not the thing that one loves that counts; what counts is the love that holds fast.—Hartford Courant.

Juvenile Court Legislation.

Senator Fairchild's bill known as No. 17. S., which is with the committee on judiciary is excellent as far as it goes. It is, "a bill providing for a juvenile court, defining its jurisdiction over children, over persons charged with contributing to the delinquency of children, and over adult persons charged with committing certain offenses which are specified in this act; providing for the appointment of probation officers, a clerk and deputy clerk, outlining their duties, and specifying their compensation; providing a lawful method of procedure against juvenile delinquents and dependents, specifying places for their temporary and permanent detention; providing for time and place of trial; providing that no destitute girl shall be sent to the industrial school for girls and providing for a seal."

The bill applies only to cities with a population of two hundred thousand or more inhabitants. This includes only Milwaukee.

Certain provisions took effect, in July, 190?, for the appointment of four or more probation officers in counties having over 150,000 population. But as most counties have only from ten thousand to seventy five thousand population, few cities are benefited by the law. Dane county has not the requisite population, although there seems to be no good reason for the absence of a juvenile court in Madison.

"Children should not be considered as criminals, but as victims of circumstance," says Judge Ben Lindsey, the famous Denver juvenile court judge. Among other principles which have been worked out are that children should not be thrown into association, before, during, or after trial, with criminals or adults under accusation, that "all the resources of the community should be used by the court to promote the welfare of the child, and to protect him," that judges should be "child experts," and that competent paid probation officers should be at the disposal of the court.

It is said that parents and others should in many cases be held responsible for the misdemeanors of children. These principles and facts being true the treatment of children in many Wisconsin courts, might be open to question. The ordinary processes of law do not fully recognize the special needs of the child in its development. Statutes set the limits of this development at various ages, from fourteen years to twenty-one in many cases.

The Wisconsin limit is sixteen years. Although the age might well be raised here, to eighteen or twenty, Wisconsin is in advance of fourteen states which have neither juvenile courts nor probation laws.

With two-thirds of the states aroused upon the necessity of better courts for children, the position taken for the benefit of Milwaukee delinquents is of interest to the entire state as a beginning of more general provisions.

In Oklahoma, "trial shall be so conducted as to disarm the child's fears, and win his respect, and confidence." Idaho provides that the school superintendent and probation judge shall work in conjunction. Iowa provides for the levying of a special tax for the support of probation officers. New Hampshire makes it unlawful to publish any of the proceedings of any juvenile court, and Washington legislation provides for the jurisdiction of the judge of the juvenile court over the employment of child labor.

Women Under Socialism.

There appears to be considerable divergence of opinion as to the position that woman would occupy under a socialistic form of life and government. Prof. Hess in a recent lecture at the University of Wisconsin said that in the event of the establishment of socialism the social and political emancipation of woman that would follow would mean the destruction of the ideals of the home, but a quite opposite view is taken by a woman thinker of the east.

Mrs. Charlot Perkins Gilman, the poet reformer, speaking of the women's forum at New York, gave her answer to the frequent question asked, "What effect will socialism have on the home?" In the first place, Mrs. Gilman said that the home as it exists is held together largely by economic causes, women and children being bound to it as a means of support and men being committed to its support. She said socialism would give all mothers a claim on the state to provide for herself and her children. She thought there would be more happy marriages under the coming regime, because marriages would be based upon love alone, and home would be held together through affection rather than material necessity.

Of course such discussions are unprofitable as are all more or less so when the terms employed have varying meanings to those employing them, but it is noticeable that the bugaboo of the danger to womanhood and the home is always held up when any proposition to enlarge the scope of the "burden bearers of the race" is advance.

Prof. Lowell, Harvard's president-to-be, has struck a sound and responsive chord in his determination to consult the views of his students as to his policy. "When I was a student in college," he said, "I had opinions, very definite opinions, as to how some of these things should be managed. I never expressed those opinions; but I still believe that those opinions were worth something. Now, I hope that you will feel free to make your opinions known. I believe very strongly in the undergraduates' view of things and I have confidence in the judgment of the undergraduates."

Whatever the outcome may be of what looks like a long fight to the death between the hatmakers and their employees, the effect on the consumer is not likely to be very serious, says the Springfield Republican. "Hats go out of fashion but they seldom wear out, and fashion in a great emergency might decree old hats as the proper thing," it adds.

A glance at our own legislature would indicate that this is the era of the young man in politics. It is the cubs, the "yearlings," that are shaking up the old bones of the state. And it is so elsewhere in this section. The oldest man in the Indiana legislature is but 61.

In vetoing the census bill President Roosevelt dealt congress his hardest and most daring blow in that he took out of the hands of the members 3,500 appointments which will now be made under the merit system if the veto stands.

A so-called electric hen is one of the latest contrivances in connection with the poultry business. Unfortunately however, while the device is warranted to prove a good hatcher it is not worth a cent as an egg producer.—Oshkosh Northwestern.

A drainage commission is now proposed at Madison. Also a utility commission for every municipality. It would not seem natural unless the legislature adds a couple of new commissions this session.—Racine Journal.

They are quarreling at Madison over who shall pray for the legislature. Some people in the state believe that all the members might get busy in that direction with some chance for improvement.—Wausau Record-Herald.

In his address here on Thursday evening, Judge Neele B. Nelson of Milwaukee paid a handsome tribute to the newsboys of Milwaukee. In the years of his service on the bench no newsboy has been brought in to him charged with crime. The reason he gives is that a boy with spunk enough to be a newsboy keeps too busy to find time to get into mischief. —Eau Claire Leader.

One of the best bills that has so far been introduced in the legislature at Madison is the one by Assemblyman Hull of Jackson county regarding the saloon limit near cities. This bill absolutely forbids the granting of a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors within one mile of the municipal limits of any city or village in the state. The bill will hit a good many saloons and road houses that are located just outside of cities and villages.—Marinette Eagle Star.

No stronger argument in favor of the reduction of removal of the present duty on lumber could be produced than that offered by the National Forest Conservation league, having its headquarters in Minneapolis. The people of Minnesota generally are taking a keen interest in the discussion of the tariff on lumber, for they have had a perfect demonstration within the past few years of what a continuance of this tax will mean to them, if, indeed, the damage already done can ever be repaired.—Whitewater Times.

The time is ripe when the legislature of the state of Wisconsin ought to enact a law governing murder, or homicide, or even attempted murder, which will absolutely prevent the plea of insanity being set up unless the person committing the murder is an escaped lunatic or notoriously an insane person.—Wausau Record-Herald.

The Evening Wisconsin of Milwaukee calls for moderation and economy in legislation from the state representatives. The editorial appeal is timely. There is no demand for great extensions of commissions and boards or for unusual appropriations in many cases. The state is experiencing a steady revival in business but cannot afford reckless waste of state funds, which would require increased taxation.—Wausau Record-Herald.

Gov. Davidson's choice of bird's-eye maple as the wood representative of the hardwood resources of the state in the cabin work of the new steamer United States, in course of construction at Manitowoc, is warranted by the fact that the maple is the state tree. The timber of Wisconsin in early days included some of the finest bird's-eye and curly maple that was ever converted into furniture or veneering. Many an old settler can tell of sawing and splitting bird's-eye maple by the cord for the kitchen fire and the heating stoves. The wood of this character that was thus used would be worth a vast fortune were it in existence today.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The New Naval Commission

Washington, D. C.—Among the members of the newly named commission to reorganize the navy none stands out more prominently than Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans and Justice Moody, former secretary of the navy. The new commission is composed of the strongest and most experienced men whose lives have been especially fitted to suggest reorganization of the navy.

Justice William Henry Moody fills a very important place on the commission, for in addition to his experience with the navy as secretary of that department from 1902 to 1904 he has had a vast legal experience and congressional experience which will serve the commission to advantage.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans is today one of the most practical and experienced authorities on naval affairs in the world. "Fighting Bob" has made a life study of his profession and knows it thoroughly.

RAILROAD COMMISSION DECIDES WISCONSIN COMPANY HAS REFORMED.

SHOULD KEEP UP STANDARDS.

Improvement of Past Year Is Commended—Poor Service Was Alleged.

That the Wisconsin Telephone company of Milwaukee has made such improvements in its service since the complaint was filed against the corporation by Lorenz & Lorenz one year ago, that mandatory order for further improvements is unnecessary, was the effect of a decision by the railroad commission, made public today.

The case was submitted on May 18 last and decided on Dec. 30 last, but the decision was so voluminous that printed copies had to be made before it could be made public. The decision contains 47 pages of printed matter in small type.

INVESTIGATION THOROUGH.

No public utility in this state has been compelled to submit to a more searching examination than was made of this company by the railroad commission, and had it not been for the prompt action of the company in improving its service as soon as the evils were pointed out, a stringent ultimatum might have been directed today, instead of this mild order.

"The tonic of these proceedings should be sufficient to prevent a relapse into the condition of the early part of the year 1907," says the commission. "It appears to us that we can only recommend to the company the maintenance of the standards of the twelve months immediately passed, and, if possible, to improve upon them; the continuation of this policy to make the physical plant the best which money and skill can produce; the application of increasing efforts in the selection of its operating force from the very best timber available, and the doing of whatever necessary to maintain the unity and continuity of that operating force."

GIST OF COMPLAINT.

The complaint filed by Lorenz & Lorenz charged that the service was unreliable and insufficient; that the operators declined to answer calls; and that the wages were too low to permit securing of competent help.

The commission carried on an independent investigation, making exhaustive tests, which showed that most calls were answered within two seconds; and the longest wait was nine seconds. Several pages in the decision is devoted to an analysis of the wages paid to operators, whose average daily wage was $1 01, and in making a comparison with the wages paid other female help for service of similar skill, finds this amount sufficient for maintaining stability of employment and high grade of service. The report shows that 223 of the operators had been in the employ of the company over forty-one months, and 447 for over twenty-three months.

MADISON GETS LINCOLN STATUE

Decoration day of this year. This statue is by Mr. Adolph A. Weinman, a pupil of St. Gaudens. Photographs of the clay statue show that the sculptor is a man of the first rank; that he has truly caught the spirit of his great master. Requests for replicas have come to the committee that has the Lincoln statue in charge from Fredericksburg, Va., from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Champaign, Illinois; St. Louis, Missouri; Lincoln, Neb.; Omaha, Neb.; Washington, D. C., and from Mr. Hicks, United States sculptor in Cuba, who desired to present this replica to the city of Havana.

"After much discussion, the committee voted to place the statue in the position of the statue to be cast, provided the Board of Public Works and the Wisconsin Telephone Co. in consequence of the statue's location in the vicinity of Richard Lloyd-Jones, one of the commissioners, executive editor of Collier's Weekly, an alumnus of the university, and a son of the founder of Hull House, Miss Jane Addams, Lloyd-Jones. When the chance came to secure the Lincoln replica for the university, the question at once arose as to the necessary funds. The situation was placed before Mr. Thomas E. Brittingham, a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin, and a friend of Mr. Weinman, and he at once appropriated the $2,000 necessary to cast the statue, and to come to him to serve the university and the state, and place it where it would win the required funds.

"The statue of Lincoln will be the work of Mr. Weinman, and not of

On Valentine's Day—or Any Other.

Underneath the window of the melancholy Dane
Ophelia sung a love song and this was its refrain
(I'd like some maid to sing it just outside of window mine!)
"And I a maid at your window, to be your Valentine!"
Now wouldn't you listen and so sweet song incline?
There are some who'd that, Ophy fair was really very bold,
But her love was burning in her, and it just had to be told!
Now, if some maiden pretty should to my window come,
And speak or sing those gladsome words, or e'en just lowly hum,
You can wager your last dollar that I'd catch on to the song,
And the maiden wouldnt wait outside my window very long.

BASEBALL SURE GO!

President John Moran Announces There Will Be Enough Money to Launch Game

TO ELECT MANAGER SOON

Baseball is a sure go!

President John Moran today said that by tonight the twenty men needed to finance the game here this season will have been secured. This means that a meeting to reorganize will be held this week. When the meeting is held officers will be chosen, five directors will be appointed and a manager will be elected.

As quickly as a manager is selected the work of signing players will begin. The impression prevails that Manager Howard Cossiboine will be re-elected, although there may be a contest. Appreciating the necessity of having a winning club, the new directors will be slow to desert one who has demonstrated that he knows how to win.

Madison One Point Short.

Madison and Evansville played nip and tuck at the high school gymnasium last night, the visitors winning the basketball contest by a score of 28 to 27.

In view of the fact that it was Madison's first game the local boys made an excellent showing. Those who played on the Madison team were Curtin and Twitchell, guards; Herper and Deedie, forwards; Lester, center.

Won't Draw Color Line.

London, Feb. 11.—An attempt to draw the color line met with signal failure today at Birmingham where an effort was made to exclude a negro student of the university from the skating rink. Students took up the negro's cause and hired a lawyer to oppose a renewal of the rink's license. The management of the rink apologized in court this morning and promised not to make any race distinction in the future.

A Mother's Gratitude

Many a Mother in Madison Will Appreciate the Following.

Many a strong man and many a healthy woman has much for which to thank mother. The care taken during their childhood brought them past the danger point and made them healthy men and women. Children are generally bothered at some period with incontinence of urine, and inability to retain it is oft times called a habit. It is not the children's fault—the difficulty lies with the kidneys, and can be readily righted if taken in the proper way. A Madison mother shows you how.

Mrs. C. Dow, living at 17 North Blair St., Madison Wis., says: "My son was troubled for some time with weak kidneys, and although we gave him many remedies nothing seemed to help him. Finally it was my good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I procured them at Edwin Sumner & Son's Drug Store. I gave them to the boy according to directions and he was soon feeling a great deal better. He continued to take them and I am sure he will be cured in a short time. I know of several others who have found the best of results from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

EXPECT GOOD TEAM

Baseball Prospects at the University of Wisconsin are Considered Bright

PAULUS HITS 'BALL HARD

Interests in athletics at the university now centers in the outlook on the diamond. With several of last years players back and a number of new men to pick from, the prospects are considered bright. Wisconsin has a heavy schedule, but the students are confident that the Badgers will give a good account of themselves.

Barlow will have to go some to hang onto his job back of the bat. Paulus, a Milwaukee boy, is out for the job and he looks good. Perhaps he is no better than Barlow as a receiver, but he certainly has it on him in hitting. This advantage may prove great enough to draw him a steady place on the 'varsity.

Whittier, who played third base two years ago, will join the spring squad. Culver, who plays third and short stop, will also be on the job. Culver has never been considered a "find" but "Kid" Taylor, a professional ballplayer, said he could be developed into a good man. Taylor's judgment has always been considered far above the average and the fact that he showed interest in Culver is a boost for the latter. Baltile is another candidate for an infield position.

Muckleston, an outfielder, says he will not get out for the team owing to a heavy school schedule. "Muck" plays a steady game and his services will be missed.

Timber is a candidate for first base. He played on the commercial team last year. Timber looks like a comer, and can hit. In the past few years Wisconsin has been weak in hitting, and Coach Tom Barry will try to strengthen the cardinal team in this partment of the game.

Work in the gymnasium cage has not drawn out many battery candidates. This being the examination period not much interest is shown in any branch of athletics.

BRYCE CEMENTS TIES THAT BIND

BRITISH AMBASSADOR BRINGS A MESSAGE OF PEACE AT MILWUKEE BANQUET.

PRAISE WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY

President Van Hise Responds With Appeal for Extension Work.—Nearly 400 Attend.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 12.—James Bryce, British ambassador, diplomat, scholar, and American-Englishman, brought a message of peace to commercial and professional Milwaukee in an address at the banquet in his honor given by the Merchants and Manufacturers' association at the Hotel Pfister Wednesday night.

Nearly 400 representatives of the citizenship of the Cream city greeted him and heard him tell of "Diplomacy as an Aid to Progress."

NATIONS IN FRIENDSHIP.

That future vexatious controversies between the United States and the land he represents are remote, if not impossible, because of the cordial relations existing between the two countries, and of treaties concluded by Secretary of State Elihu Root and himself, he declared most emphatically.

After lauding the German-American citizenship of the city which entertained him yesterday, and speaking feelingly of the bonds of sympathy between the two nations, the distinguished guest dwelt in detail upon the reasons why the future should further cement the ties which bind the two world powers.

"You may be quite sure that when you celebrate the centenary of your great president on Friday next that you will have the deep sympathy and cordial assent of the people of England," Mr Bryce said, while his hearers burst into applause, and martial strains of both nations from an orchestra concealed at the end of the banquet hall.

PRAISE FOR UNIVERSITY.

Another feature of the altogether modest but meaty words of the man who analyzed a nation in "The American Commonwealth" was the tribute he paid to the extension work of the University of Wisconsin.

He said he had been struck with the statewide interest in education and science as emanating from the university. He spoke of the interest of farmers in the agricultural school. The value of land even, he said, had been increased by the scientific research of the men in the laboratories of the institution. Science had revolutionized industry and was now turning its attention to agriculture.

"So, gentelmen of Wisconsin," he said, "do not begrudge any money you can spend for abstract science in the University of Wisconsin."

VAN HISE IN RESPONSE.

"The Relation of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association to Education," as discussed by President Charles R. Van Hise, University of Wisconsin, was shown to be great, inasmuch as it had stood sponsor for the Milwaukee school of trades, a modern institution, he said, destined to work out grevious problems of the future and possessed by few cities in the present day.

President Van Hise, while not taking direct issue with Toastmaster Moss, who replied to statements of Prof. E. A. Ross, apparently made a veiled reference to the incident when he said members of the faculty and scientists in Madison who have been laboring for the education and progress of those unable to seek knowledge at its fountain, had a right to expect "freedom from criticism and judgment." He turned to Mr Moss as he said this.

The great problem for the educators at Madison, Dr. Van Hise averred, was to diffuse the knowledge gained there among the present elder generation who did not learn it in school. Much contagious disease, he said, could be wiped out if what is known by men at the university could be brought to all the people in the state. University extension work, he said, was calculated to accomplish this, and he had little need to exhort the Merchants and Manufacturers' association to support it.

"When the people of the state understand," he said, "as do the merchants and manufacturers the gain along all lines to the state through research work, the relations of the graduate school to undergraduate instruction, there can be no doubt that the state as a whole will support research and graduate work even as the merchants and manufacturers of Milwaukee have done from the outset.

"The merchants and manufacturers have seen that research and the advancement of knowledge constitute one of the fundamental duties of the university. Instructional work at Madison is for some thousands of students who chance to go there. The research work of the university is for the two and a half million people of the state. It would be easy to show that in consequence of research work done at the university, the wealth of the state is annually increased by many millions of dollars. No man may estimate the advantages to the state of the research work and advanced instruction of the university along other than material lines."

Mr. G. M. Reynolds President of the Continental National Bank of Chicago, Whose Friends Are Urging his Appointment as Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, D. C.—George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental bank of Chicago, is being discussed in political-financial circles as being under consideration by President-elect Taft for secretary of the treasury.

In view of Mr. Taft's emphatic announcement that no further announcements on the cabinet would be made public until March 4, and his added statement that he would deny any reports of selections cropping up before that date, the friends of Mr. Reynolds are making no claims. They advance the argument, however, that Mr. Reynolds is eminently fitted for the place by training and because of his wide grasp of affairs.

Mr Reynolds is president of the Aerican Bankers' association.

Mr. Reynolds was born on a farm near Panora, Iowa, in 1865, and when 14 years old became a clerk in the Guthrie County bank at Panora. It was incorporated later as the Guthrie County National bank and Mr. Reynolds was elected assistant cashier. He moved to Nebraska in 1886 where he helped to organize a loan and investment company.

Two years later he returned to Panora, and, with his father and brothers, bought a controlling interest in the Guthrie National bank, of which he was made cashier and manager. His success with that institution attracted attention from other banks and in 1893 he was invited to become cashier of the Des Moines National bank of Des Moines. He accepted and conducted the bank in so careful a manner through the panic of 1893, and the subsequent hard times, that in 1895 he was elected president. By that time the institution had become the largest National bank in the state.

Mr. Reynolds was made cashier of the Continental National in December, 1897, and was promoted to the presidency. He was made a member of the executive committee of the American Bankers' association in 1896 and served for three years. He was made treasurer of the association in 1896, and later was made president.

FOR ST. VALENTINE'S.

With St. Valentine's day only two days hence, the housewife who loves to entertain is casting about for suitable dishes to adorn her dinner, supper or luncheon table. The preferred color for the good old saint's day is a rosy pink, and this can be introduced into many dishes.

For cutting cakes and sandwiches, you can secure tin hearts in many sizes, also heart-shaped jelly molds, and paper cases in heart shape, for serving creamed fish or meat.

Mock-bisque soup—A delicious first course for a valentine lunch or dinner. Simmer a can of tomatoes, with half a small onion sliced fine, for half an hour. Have ready one-fourth of a teacup of pearl tapioca which has been soaked over night and then cooked until clear, but not mushy in a double boiler; also one teacup of clear beef or veal stock. Rub the tomatoes through a sieve, add a tablespoon of butter, the stock and salt and pepper to taste, and turn into an agate or porcelain stew pan. In another pan bring one quart of fresh, sweet milk to a boil. Add this slowly to the boiling tomatoes and stock, allow it to come to a second boil, and serve at once with croutons.

Shrimp salad—If you cannot secure fresh shrimps, canned ones will serve the purpose. If you use the canned fish, remove from the can to a colander and rinse several times with very cold water. Set away in a cold place for an hour. Dip each shrimp in a mixture of lemon juice, salt and pepper and set aside for another hour. In the meantime, soak a quarter of a box of gelatin in half a cup of water. When soft, add a large cupful of boiling water and stir over the fire until dissolved, then add the juice of half a large lemon. Strain through a jelly bag into a cup or small pitcher. Have ready some heart-shaped individual molds. Pour the unsweetened lemon gelatin into the bottom of each mold and stick into each a few shrimps. When this first layer of gelatin begins to set or form add a second layer and set the forms away to chill. When ready to serve they should turn out whole. Arrange on crisp, pale green lettuce leaves, pour meyonnaise dressing around each form in a small circle, and garnish with more whole shrimps and slices of lemon cut in quarters.

Frut jelly—The housewife who has on hand some of her own jelly made from raspberries and currants can make a most artistic dessert for a St Valentine's luncheon. If the dining room is not too warm it will also serve as a center piece. Melt a pint of the home-made jelly and set aside. Have ready half a box of gelatin dissolved in half a cup of cold water. Bring to a boil in an agate or porcelain saucepan one scant cup of sugar, one cup of tart orange juice and the juice of half a large lemon. Add the gelatin to this, the melted jelly last and simmer for a few minutes; then pour through a jelly bag into a pitcher. Dip a deep, heart-shaped mold into cold water, shake out the water, but do not wipe with a cloth. Settle this in a bed of chopped ice and pour in enough of the jelly to cover the bottom of the pan to the depth of half an inch. Have ready a cupful of nicely prepared fresh fruit, small sections of peeled oranges, seeded Malaga grapes, sliced bananas, bits of preserved or candied pineapple. When the jelly has formed a little, arranged a layer of the fruit, sticking it deeply enough in the halfformed jelly so it will not move; then pour another layer of the melted jelly over the fruit. Continue this process until the mold is full, set away on ice to chill, turn out on a cut-glass dish and surround with whipped cream.

Cupid cakes—Warm but do not melt half a cup of butter. Cream with this two cups of sifted sugar, pulverized or confectioners' sugar preferred. Add slowly half a cup of sweet milk and alternately the whites of four eggs and one-half cups of sifted flour. Finally add a teaspoonful of vanilla or half a teaspoon of almond flavoring and one heaping teaspoon of baking powder. Bake in square pans. It should be two inches or a trifle less in thickness when baked. Cut this, when cool, in heart-shaped cakes (the scraps can be used for queen pudding later) and ice with rose icing. To make the latter, drop into a cold bowl the white of one egg and a teaspoon of cold water. Stir into this gradually sifted confectioners' sugar, rose flavoring and cochineal coloring. When thick enough to spread, but not run, ice the tops and sides of the little cakes. It should be a delicate pink. In the center of each iced cake you can stick half a candied cherry with two leaf-shaped bits of angelica.

Chorus Girls of Yesterday and Today

So much has been written regarding the elevation of the stage that there is little left to be said upon this subject says Mort. H. Singer, the noted Chicago manager. But strangely enough, comparatively nothing has been said regarding one of its most interesting features—the chorus girl.

If the history of chorus girl is ever written it will doubtless be divided into two periods—before Edward E. Rice and after Edward E. Rice. The pre-Rice girl belongs to the dark ages of the chorus—a time when chorus girls, pirates and train robbers were all assigned to the same unhealthy district in the lower regions by well-meaning, notoriety-seeking reformers; a time when chorus girls were engaged for quantity rather than quality; when the producing manager engaged his corps de ballet much as contemporaneous sailing masters then engaged a crew—by the shanghai method. In those days the chorus girls came from dark and obscure places—from the poorer sections of the big cities, with an occasional ox-eyed innocent from the farm draughted for variety's sake. Little was expected of her and little was given. She stood around the stage in a costume which exposed the reason for her employment, carried a wooden spear which she broke only occasionally, and followed the leader. Every time the manager clapped his hands she realized it was up to her to do something and she looked at the girl ahead to see what it was to be done. It didn't require any superhuman mental effort to do this.

Edward E. Rice was the first man to seek intelligence in a chorus girl. He was not moved to do this by any moral or sociological impulse—it was a plain matter of business. In "Evangeline" Mr. Rice had some rather expensive costumes—some of the kind that wouldn't stand being thrown into a dirty corner of a dressing room floor. Mr. Rice had learned that the average chorus girl would do this, not through any desire to cause the management grief, but simply because she didn't know any better. For this reason he sought girls who knew enough to keep their costumes clean and according to all reports, is was a very difficult matter and undertaking. Indeed this one feeble effort to discover intelligent chorus girls met with such awful obstacles that Mr. Rice never dared go any further on the quest.

But from the trail he blazed great things were to come. Other managers noting that Mr. Rice had expensive costumes, went and did likewise, and they had to find girls with enough sense to keep their costumes clean.

Next came a manager who had been looking so long at amazon marches and the old jail-bird like swing step, which went under the name of dancing that he concluded every one would welcome an innovation. He went after girls who could really dance and his success was tremendous when the first eight dancing girls appeared.

From dancing to singing was the next step. The old-time chorus was usually vocally on a par with a three-note factory whistle. One day a manager awoke to the fact that there might be some money in presenting the public with a chorus that could sing. These girls came from better districts and better families, and the personnel of the chorus was decidedly improved, socially, mentally and morally. During the past few years the advance in the status of the chorus girl has been so rapid that today there is practically not one first class musical show in the country that has what might be called an old style chorus.

The girls must know how to wear clothes as though they belonged to them, for it is only the little girls nowadays who wear tights. Costumes the big girls wear cost a lot of money, and these girls must wear them as though they were to the manor born. The professional model must have nothing the best of her in bringing out the good qualities of each gown.

Now this is not all. The modern chorus girl must not only be intelligent but she must look intelligent. A dull, stupid or common face is no longer considered desirable, even though it be moderately pretty. The girls must have the "air distingue," they must look the part. A glance at the pictures printed above will convey the idea much more clearly than words could.

That the girls do not seek clandestine acquaintances with the young men who hang around stage doors is made apparent by the fact that whenever the young men grow too bold the girls invariably ask protection from the management. Of course there are exceptions to all rules, but there can be no doubt but what the chorus girl has arisen high in her profession. The quality of the chorus today is infinitely better than it ever was before, but as a field for future stars the chorus is no longer fertile. Nowadays it takes all the talent a girl can command to remain a feature of the chorus.

OLDEST RAILWAY STATION AGENT IN AMERICA, IF NOT IN THE WORLD, IS STILL SERVING AT MAZOMANIE

A man whose proud privileges it is to claim the undisputed title of being the oldest railroad station agent in America, if not in the world, is John G. Stickney, ferriest and passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad at Mazomanie, about twenty miles west of Madison. He has been in the continuous employ of that corporation for fifty-eight years, or since 1851. He is 81 years old.

Mr. Stickney is the descendant of an old English family which founded the town of Stickney in England at the time of the Norman conquest, and his immediate forefathers were among the early colonists to America, and conspicuous in the colonial wars which preceded the Revolution.

In the struggle for independence, Captain John B. Stickney, his grandfather, fought under Colonel Warren at the battle of Bunker Hill and served throughout the war with honor and distinction. Capt. Stickney's son, and the father of the present station agent, was colonel of Rogers' famous ranger regiment frequently spoken of by physicians in Lansing, Mich., where John B. Stickney was born, in August, 1825.

John B. Stickney received his early education in the Lancaster academy, graduating from it at a time when Wells Hiram Yi, for a short period. He was married to Miss Charlotte Moore of Lancaster and presently ensconced with, landing in Milwaukee in 1851. He was by no means idle, however, for in the meantime he had been appointed by the "St. Paul," which then had but twenty miles of track in operation. He became station agent at Mazomanie in 1856 and is still in active charge of that office, which is an important one in that section of the state, being also a junction point.

An ardent lover of horses, Mr. Stickney raised some of the finest horses ever bred in the Northwest, and was instrumental in aiding Capt. Ely in Wisconsin, having driven his "Prince" to many successful races.

Mr. Stickney is the oldest living member of Crescent lodge, F. and A. M., he one of the original members of the republican party and has many friends among the political leaders of the nation. He accompanied President Roosevelt on his first campaign trip through the northwest.

CONGRESSMEN TALK FOR POSTAL BANKS

MEMBERS OF BOTH BRANCHES KEEN INTEREST IN THE SAVINGS TOPIC

MANY ARE WORKING HARD ON IT

La Follette and Files Like General Idea of Bill and Will Use Efforts in Its Behalf.

The poll of congress which is being made by the Postal Savings bank league, with headquarters in Chicago, shows that the postal savings deposit measure, if now admitted, would have a majority in the senate of four to one and in the house of two to one if it could be brought to a vote notwithstanding the obstructive tactics of the opposition.

The league has met opposition among the members of congress to put the system into operation and cement minor defects later on experience dictates. The measure has been a subject of consideration for over fourteen years, several presidents and investigating committees having approved the general principles involved.

REPRESENTATIVES FAVOR IT.

I have carrying out the policy of the republican party to establish postal savings of Wisconsin. Representative Kustermann of Wisconsin, Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, Representative Davis of Minnesota, Representative Steenerson of Minnesota, Representative Volstead of Minnesota, Representative Miller of Minnesota, Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, Representative Davidson of Wisconsin and Representative Stafford of Wisconsin.

SENATORS ALSO LIKE IDEA.

"I will add in the passage of a bill for this system," writes Senator William E. Borah of Idaho. "I should dislike very much to delay the passage of a measure of this kind, and my opinion is that it will be speedily and passed," he concludes. Senator H. C. Lodge of Massachusetts commends entire: "I am and always have been in favor of the general proposition of postal savings banks."

Other representatives who declare in favor of postal savings banks and who promise to vote and work accordingly include Reed of Wisconsin, Kinkaid of Nebraska, Dixon of Montana, Nicholas of Colorado, Heyburn of Idaho, Cary of Wisconsin, Burton of Delaware, Gamble of New York, Taylor of Alabama, Fuller of Illinois, Madison of Kansas, Stevens of Minnesota, Davidson of Wisconsin and Wilson of Pennsylvania.

Senators Frye of Maine, Long of Kansas, Perkins of California, Curtis of Kansas and Burkett of Nebraska are other open champions of the measure.

Representatives Darragh of Michigan Burchfield of Pennsylvania, Denver of Illinois, Gardner of Massachusetts and Hamilton of Michigan declared against the measure.

HASTELL WILL WORK FOR IT.

Congressman Henry Sherman Boutell of Chicago was in the city today and you that I shall be glad to do any thing in my power to expedite the passage of a postal savings bank bill at the present session," he said. "I have been in the ways and means committee but a few days, however, and have been working on revision of the tariff, so that I have had little time to look up on the floor of the house and no time to consider the postal savings bill. I am in favor of a postal savings bank bill would always command my presence in the house and I trust that the measure will receive attention and become a law at the present session of congress."

LA FOLLETTE & OTHERS LIKE IT

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin wrote: "I am in favor of legislation establishing postal savings banks, and will do what I can to secure the early enactment of such a law. However, I have no idea that the matter will be permitted to reach the senate for action during the present congress."

Congressman Pifer of Washington wrote: "I approve of the general principles involved in the postal savings bank bill and I intend to do everything I can do to aid in securing the adoption of the principle at the present session of congress."

Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson wrote: "I am in favor of the general principles involved in the postal savings bank, and will be glad to support a proper measure of this kind, should it come up at the present session."

ODMERTY COMBATS WEALTH.

Riches Come His Way But He Will Try to Heal Them Off.

Through a big and sudden rise in the value of stock of the Pioneer Gas and Electric company, H. L. Doherty, president of the company, is reported to be $100,000 richer on his favorite pastime than a few days ago. It is said the Morgan interests are seeking to distribute the company property because of the belief it has in sufficient value to justify the rise. It is the cause of the rise that it is understood Doherty will fight from the anti-corporationists.

measure fortunate in the characters of the two greatest of our public men, Washington and Lincoln. Each of them, when they delivered the farewell address and the Gettysburg address, was the most unpopular man in the country. Each of them in remarkable but very like the great qualities which rendered each of them unpopular. Each of them was the all-wanted man in an hour of need for his generation could or did render. Each of them was the man of his time, and the whole three hold ideals were guided by the simplest common sense. Each of them was a man of character, of heroism and a man who understood public prosperity. Each possessed all the qualities which make a man great. Each of them was who took mighty elements of character. Each possessed also
